Speaking a Common Language: From On-Boarding to the Board Room

Cyber and climate change risks are now ranked as the top concerns facing the world and, economically, they represent huge societal, human and business costs. A cyberattack can jeopardize operations and create reputational and brand damage, which causes irreparable harm to larger companies and threatens the very existence of smaller ones. Cyberattacks can also bring public infrastructure to its knees.

Organizations are becoming more invested in mitigation and are aware of their obligation to manage down cyber risk, yet precisely where ownership lies regarding corporate resiliency is often unclear and unclaimed. As threat actors continue to evade into their virtual rabbit holes, the chasm widens between the real exposure on the front line and the perception of cyber risk in the boardroom.

The carefully curated world-class agenda for the second annual Bermudian edition of the International Cyber Risk Management Conference focuses on tangible takeaways that cyber risk stakeholders can use to strengthen resilience and improve cyber risk communication across their organizations and their supply chains.

Is Cyber Risk Part of Your Business Reality?

The International Cyber Risk Management Conference is designed to appeal to a wide audience of professionals. Cyber risk is everyone's business and a growing area of concern for every organization and industry. The conference is programmed to provide actionable information for all professionals that play a role in managing cyber risk in their organization, including:

- Corporate Risk Managers
- Governance Professionals
- Captive Owners
- Corporate Counsel
- Claims Professionals
- Insurers
- Audit
- Solution Providers
- Reinsurers
- CISOs, CSOs, and CTOs
- Insurance Brokers
- Regulators
